Community Celebration At Woodhull Church Features 100th Birthday of Member

Dinner Served at Noon to 200 Guests — Interesting Program—Hard Work and Independence are Cardinal Points of Centenarian's Credo — Honored Guest Was Born on the Old Miller Homested in Town of Troupsburg.

Relatives, friends and neighbors from this and adjoining villages and cities gathered at Woodhull Friday, February 21, to pay tribute to Mrs. Eunice Bates, in honor of her 100th birthday anniversary.

The centenarian was honor guest at a big community celebration at the Woodhull Baptist church of which she is its oldest member.

Dinner was served at noon to about 200 guests. A pyramid birthday cake was the center piece for the guest of honor's table. The cake decorations were all in white and in the center was a bouquet of white carnations with candles surrounding each layer.

During the dinner hour the following program was presented:

Vocal selection, "Somebody", Esther Symonds, Miss Gladys Eaton accompanist. Reading, "Mother's Donuts," Mrs. Menry Myers. Violin solo, 'Hymne a' Saint Cecile—Gounad, J. Willard Gossner, piano accompanist, Miss Gladys Eaton.

At 2:00 o'clock a program and address were given as follows:

Prelude, Earl Miller; invocation, the Rev. J. Wesley Babcock; hymn, "Blessed Assurance"; vocal solo, "Sometime, Somewhere", Mrs. Menzo R. Husted; scripture, Psalm 130, the Rev. George Orton, solo, "When the Sunset Turns the Ocean Blue to Gold", Mrs. Earl Calkins; duet, the Misses Minnie and Marion Miller; history of Mrs. Bates, Carl Carpenter; solo, "Alone", Mrs. Earl Calkins, hymn, "Jesus Lover of My Soul"; address by the Rev. Clarence Walker of Sayre. He chose for his subject, "To Live a Hundred Years" which is a miracle in this day of ours. He spoke of her marvelous journey through life and now had a blessed view as she reached the top. Hymn, "The Old Rugged Cross," At the close of the program she was presented a personal letter of congratulations from President Franklin D. Roosevelt in honor of her 100th birthday anniversary. She was recipient of many gifts, cards and letters, a purse of money and also flowers from friends in Florida.

Members of the Woodhull High School faculty and students attended in a body, paying homage to the dear old lady.

Mrs. Bates philosophy is that, "hard work never hurt any one, unless of course, one over-did it," and "be independent", that's the nicest way to get along in life. This idea has been exemplified in her life and is still carried out, for she continues to do her own housework and enjoys doing all kinds of baking. During recent years, she has enjoyed the art of rug making, these have won for her considerable fame and have been in great demand, her last one being a doll size rug which she completed on Thursday to be given to Eloise Whittenhall, age 7, who also celebrated her birthday on February 23.

Mrs. Bates has always enjoyed good health and rarely has had to call a physician. She attributes that fact to no worrying and hard work. She still retains a keen mind and an ability to enjoy life. Although her sight is good enough to allow her to perform her daily tasks, she is unable to do any reading.

The interesting history of Mrs. Bates life as given by Mr. Carpenter was as follows: It was one hundred years ago on Sunday, February 23, that a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Parley B. Miller, in a log house built by her father. She was one of a family of nine children. There were six brothers, Charles Erastus, Roswell, William Smith, Thomas and Horace and two sisters, Julia and Martha. Mrs. Bates was born on the old Miller homestead in the town of Troupsburg, which is now either the Samuel Olmstead or Waldo Symonds farm.

Her mother's maiden name was Eliza A. Minier and she came from Connecticut, her grandfather emigrating from Holland. Her parents

Two songs were sung by the Girls Glee Club. Those taking part being Barbara Van Skiver, Marian Miller, Eleanor Andrews, Ila Card, Esther Symonds, Dorothy Paul. Doris Brown, Vera Peters, Greta Smith, Frances Bebout and Ruth Mason accompanied at the piano by Miss Betty Park.

Two violin solos — Adorelion — Borowski and Perpetuum Mobile — Bohm, were given by J. Willard Gossner with Miss Gladys Eaton as accompanist.

The history of Founders Day, February 17, was read by Mrs. Symonds, a birthday cake was an added attraction. This was later sold at auction and served with the refreshments which followed at the close of the session.

President Writes To Centenarian

Among the many gifts and remembrances received by Mrs. Eunice Bates on the recent occasion of her one-hundredth birthday anniversary was a letter from President Franklin D. Roosevelt reading

"I have learned that on February 23rd, you will celebrate your one-hundredth birthday anniversary.

"I am very happy to join your other friends in extending hearty congratulations to you on this occasion and my very best wishes for your welfare and happiness.

"It is rather unique that Steuben has two women each one hundred years old, at present within its boundaries as on the 24th a Campbell lady is also celebrating hers. Can another county boast the same?"

Among those who called on Mrs. Bates on her birthday was Mrs. Henry Sherwood and daughter, Ruth. Mrs. Sherwood's birthday falls on the same day as that of Mrs. Bates, February 23rd.

Republicans and Democrats Enter Rival Slates For Village Election, March 17th

Fusion Fails—Republicans Name Fred G. Clark and Charles Rice — Democrats Chose Fred Frost and Russell B. Allen—J. Homer Reynolds Declines to Accept Renomination—Republicans Shout Down Rival's Proposal of Russ-Allen Slate.

Attempted fusion on the part of Republican and Democratic village caucusses failed Saturday evening and as a result Fred G. Clark and Charles Rice, Republicans, will oppose Russell B. Allen and Fred Frost, Democrats, as candidates for village trustees at the village election March 17th. J. Homer Reynolds, Republican, who has been a member of the board for the past several years, declined to accept renomination. Mr. Allen, seeking reelection, has also been a member for several years past.

The Republican caucus convened Saturday night in the Welles Hose rooms. Lester Andrews, county committeeman, presided as temporary chairman. Attorney Charles L. Crane chosen chairman of the meeting, appointed Wilfred M. Miller and Charles Rice as secretaries and John W. Russ and Elmer C. Bovee as tellers.

Mr. Crane announced that the nominations would be made to fill the expired terms of J. Homer Reynolds, Republican, and Russell B. Allen Democrat, as village trustees. Lester Andrews announced that Mr. Reynolds had authorized him to state that he would not accept nomination for another term. Mr. Andrews also stated the Democrats had expressed a willingness to accept a fusion slate and suggested that if fusion was approved by a majority of the Republicans, that a committee be appointed to meet with a similar committee from the Democratic Caucus, then in session in the Phoenix Hose rooms across the hall.

It was decided to adopt a tenative all-Republican slate before entering into negotiations with the rival party. The name of Fred G. Clark was placed in nomination by Elmer C. Bovee and that of Charles Rice was entered by Earl Greengrass. Upon the motion of Mayor Sisto, the chair was authorized to appoint three to confer with a like committee from the Democrats in an effort to arrive at a mutually satisfactory fusion ticket. Mr. Crane, the chairman, named Lester Andrews, D. J. Colbert and Charles Rice as the Republican conferees.

A few moments after the delegation left the caucas room, Lester Andrews returned to state that the Democrats were receptive to a proposal of fusion but that they had rejected the tentative Republican candidates proposing instead the name of John W. Russ, Republican, as a running mate for Russell B. Allen, Democrat.

No sooner was the announcement of the Democratic proposal voiced by Mr. Andrews than Hubert Orr exclaimed "What do they want to do, run our caucus?" and amid considerable din the voice of Mayor Sisto was heard to move that the tentative slate be made final and that the name of Fred G. Clark and Charles Rice be declared the Republican nominees for village trustees. The motion was adopted in rapid-fire order and after authorizing the town committee to act as village committee for the ensuing year, the meeting adjourned.

When the Democratic caucus became aware that the Republicans had rejected the Democratic proposal, they adjourned their caucus until Monday night, when their ticket, consisting of Mr. Frost and Mr. Allen was formally placed in the field. John M. O'Keefe served as chairman of the Democratic caucus and Robert Ginnane as secretary.

A Hollow Anniversary

One of the burning shames of the present Administration has been the wholesale restoration of the spoils system which had been gradually discredited by an imposing line of presidents of both party affiliations. That good and great Democrat, Grover Cleveland, although not able to take credit for founding the civil service was keenly alive to its needed mission and strongly condemned the spoils system. Yet the Roosevelt Administration has little in common with Cleveland Democrats so it is small wonder the merit system has been tossed out of the window along with sanctity of the government's pledge on the face of our bonds.

About three weeks ago the U. S. Civil Service celebrated the 53rd anniversary of its founding. President Roosevelt, forgetful of the record of his administration wrote to the League of Women Voters the following:

"It matters not what political party is in power by the elective will of the people, the government functions for all; and there can be no question of greater moment, or broader effect than the maintenance, strengthening and extension of the merit system, established in the competitive principles of the Civil Service Act."

Others in the country took a different view of the effect of the "elective will of the people" in placing Mr. Roosevelt as executive over our nation. Victor Weybright wrote in the February Survey Graphic: "That 200,000 newcomers to the federal service have been exempt from civil service in the past three years has alarmed critics of bureaucracy."

Lawrence Sullivan wrote in the February Atlantic Monthly: The present administration has added roundly 235,000 persons to the direct full-time payroll of the federal government, but only one in 107 among the new personnel is under civil service."

Which is to be expected of a president whose political fortunes are under the guidance of the type of politician represented by Boss Farley. To Roosevelt and Farley political victory means that "to the victor belongs the spoils". Political realists they have made the most of the vast powers thrust by a nerveless Congress into the President's hands. Huge sums of money piled up under so-called emergency acts such as AAA and the various relief agency triplets have provided the Executive with almost unlimited patronage with which to build a great re-election machine.

While Mr. Roosevelt has been branding those who oppose him with such high-sounding phrases as "entrenched greed", he has left no stone unturned that could be rolled to advantage in the coming campaign to perpetuate these great powers in his hands.

Under the Roosevelt Administation the Civil Service Act certainly celebrated a hollow anniversary.

Facts Tell The Story

In the welter of talk and argument, blast and counter blast, concerning the vague "utility problem", there is danger that the verbally-deluged citizen will lose sight of the power industry's achievement —an achievement that is proven by cold figures.

Here are facts: In 22 years, between 1913 and 1935, the cost of living, according to the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, rose 40 per cent. The cost of doing business, while exact statistics are not obtainable, obviously increased as much or more. Wages, materials, supplies, taxes —everything that goes into an industry's operation expense account—rose in price, and in some cases, notably taxes, skyrocketed.

In spite of that, the average cost of domestic electric power in July, 1935, was 5.6 cents per kilowatt-hour—as compared with 8.1 cents in 1913. In other words, while costs in general rose about 40 per cent, the cost of electricity dropped 31 per cent.

The American people receive the best power service in the world. In no other country is the average home so well supplied with electric labor-saving devices. These devices now in use in America number 100,000,000 — including such "luxuries" as 6,000,000 electric refrigerators, 1,225,000 electric ranges and 3,250,000 electric sewing machines, which are almost unknown save to the wealthy abroad—and the total is constantly growing.

Keep these facts in mind when you read a blast at the mythical "power trust".

A Present Flood Menace

The stage is all set in Addison for one of the worst floods in the history of the village. If local people escape staggering loss in property between now and the first of April, it will be only because spring comes in a long, drawn-out series of freezing nights and thawing days.

Part of the stage setting for a disastrous flood has been prepared by forces of nature, but the dangers have been greatly augmented by the hands of men working, rather incongruously, in an attempt to end floods.

As to the forces of nature that are bringing parts of the village into danger of inundation, the severity of the winter must of course be blamed. With cold weather surpassing all previous records for continuity it is small wonder that great reserves of water in the form of ice and snow have been stored throughout the length of the great watersheds that converge within the limits of this village. Snow in the wooded hills is said to be three and four feet deep and every stream is choked with masses of ice. At Derby Switch the river ice is 24 inches thick, while a little further west at the Rathbone mill pond it is 30 inches.

Ice running from 24 to 30 inches in thickness is hazard enough to think about coming down the river, but the danger is not confined to the work of nature. For weeks workers on the relief project which started so auspiciously to dike our dangerous streams have been busy tearing down the south bank of the Canisteo River along the outside of the big bend behind Main street, digging down the sloping bank and dumping the dirt into the river channel.

People who have been watching the river in spring floods for years know that ice packs jam in the bend. Originally when the ice is not too thick water will gradually work the loose cakes under the main jam and they with the surplus water will eventually clear the barrier. This year with all the dirt taken off from the bank and dumped into the river the channel is certain to be choked. Only a miracle can prevent the great cakes of ice jamming immovably against the straight south bank and forming a dam to hold back the spring flood waters.

An entire winter's work has been spent building a scow and rigging up a pile driver which has yet to drive its first pile to support the dike. If a life-size ice jam forms in the big bend this spring it will take a battleship to make a big enough anchor to hold the scow from going down the river.

Owners of property near the river should be prepared to save what they can, if the ice breaks up suddenly.

The Tack Swallower

When Boris Kikovsky Swallowed a brass tack he thought he had really swallowed a gold mine. He decided to make money on the mishap, not in a circus sideshow or on the stage, but in the fake claim racket. He was successful—for a time.

In playing his simple act, Boris traveled from town to town. In a strange city he picked out the best restaurant, entered and ordered a meal. Half way through it he sprang to his feet with a blood-curdling yell. "I have swallowed a tack" he screamed.

The startled restaurant manager usually sought to quiet him until he reached a doctor, but Boris continued his noise as part of the act. He demanded X-rays, which inevitably revealed the tack nestling prettily in his insides. Afraid of a civil suit, the restaurant proprietors made quick settlements—and large ones.

Then Boris made the mistake of trying his racket on a member of the Index Bu-

THE FIRST ROBIN!

The Anatomy of 1936

By WALTER LIPPMANN

THE one certain fact in the whole political situation is that the regular Republican party cannot take charge of the government in the next four years. It can elect a President. It can obtain a majority in the lower house. But it cannot control the Senate. Therefore by regular Republican votes alone it cannot fulfill a single promise that requires legislation, and it cannot make a single appointment that requires the consent of the Senate. It can accomplish nothing without the active co-operation of a very substantial part of the Democratic party.

For in order to obtain control of the government the Republicans would need two successive landslides and an epidemic of cholera besides.

Let us look at the facts. Of the ninety-six Senators, thirty-two will hold their seats until 1941; that is to say, throughout the next Administration. Among these thirty-two Senators there are just four regular Republicans, Hale (Me.), Austin (Vt.), Townsend (Del.), Vandenberg (Mich.). The other twenty-eight are all Democrats, or insurgents, namely Johnson (Calif.), Shipstead (Minn.), Frazier (N. D.), La Follette (Wis.).

There are then thirty-two Senators who will hold their seats until 1939; that is to say, throughout the first half of the next Administration. There are three regular Republicans among them: Gibson (Vt.), Davis (Pa.) and Steiwer (Ore.). The other twenty-nine are Democrats except for Nye (N. D.) and Norbeck (S. D.).

Thus only death can alter the fact that for the first two years of the next Administration the Democrats alone will have an absolute minimum of fifty-one votes in the Senate, or two more than a majority. With the insurgents there are fifty-seven votes that the regular Republican leadership cannot control.

But that is not the full measure of the regular Republican impotence. For among the thirty-two Senators to be elected this year, eight come from the solid South. They are virtually certain to be Democrats. This raises the Democratic strength to fifty-nine, the non-Republican strength to sixty-five or more than two-thirds of the whole Senate.

Even that does not tell the whole story. There are Senators to be elected in eleven other states where the chances of a regular Republican victory are to say the least dubious. These include Tennessee, Kentucky, Oklahoma, West Virginia and New Mexico; they include Mr. Borah's seat in Idaho, Mr. Norris's in Nebraska, Mr. Bulow's in South Dakota, Mr. Couzens's in Michigan and one each in Montana and Wyoming. Regular Republicans might capture some of these seats, but they would do wonders if they got half of them. If they got all of them, they would not control one-third of the Senate. If they got half of them, they would have about twenty-five votes out of ninetysix

The full measure of regular Republican weakness for at least two years to come may be appreciated when it has been noted that if they carry every state north of the Mason and Dixon line in November, and supplant every insurgent by a regular in the primaries, the best they can hope for is less than one-third of the Senate. They can never hope for a majority at any time in the next four years. The practical truth about the situation is that they are certain of seven regular Republicans during the next Administration, and that until 1939 they have no reasonable prospect of more than about eighteen; that, if they had two landslides, they might reach forty in the second half of the next Administration.

They cannot obtain a majority. Therefore, they cannot govern without a working arrangement with the Democrats.

This, is, however, by no means the whole picture, and if Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Farley infer from it that their position is invincible they will be jumping to unwarranted conclusions. It is entirely conceivable, in the first place, that the anti-New Deal tide will be strong enough to elect a Republican President and a Republican majority in the House. The Senate alignment would then produce a deadlock of government but not a continuation of the New Deal. In the second place, it is even more probable that if the President is re-elected, the anti-New Deal tide will express itself by a revolt within the ranks of the Democratic majority.

Who are these rebellious Democrats? They can be defined, I think, as those who really believe in the principles of the 1932 platform and those who think they do. To make the matter clearer we may take as representative of the first group men like Senator Carter Glass and Mr. Douglas; as representative of the second, Al Smith.

Now, when Al Smith addressed the Liberty League and invited it to look at the record on the platform he was very effective in denouncing the expenditures, the centralization, and the bureaucratic expansion which the platform denounced. But he forgot to mention the basic principle from which the whole platform was derived, the very essence of its whole philosophy. This was the declaration in the first sentence that "the chief causes" of the depression "were the disastrous policies pursued by our government since the World War, of economic isolation, fostering the merger of competitive business into monopolies and encouraging the indefensible expansion and contraction

TVA Ruling Seen as Clarifying Constitution for Average Man

BY MARK SULLIVAN

The Supreme Court decision permitting the government to sell electricity at Wilson Dam can serve to make a part of the Constitution clear to the average reader. There is growing interest in that document which in ordinary times is taken for granted. Presumably, the interest will increase with further decisions to be handed down by the Supreme Court, and with emergence of the Constitution and the court as an issue in the Presidential campaign.

It here said will understand that in the effort to be clear and simple, some qualifications are omitted. Legal exactness is not possible in so limited a space. And legal exactness might confuse the non-legal reader.

The Constitution has several parts. The part here dealt with is the relation between the Federal government at Washington and the several states.

The United States is not a single nation in the ordinary sense. It is what its name implies, "united states." It is, to quote a phrase often used, an "indissoluble union" of forty-eight states. In this union, the Federal government at Washington has certain powers, and the states have certain powers.

When the original thirteen states formed the Union they carefully wrote down in the Constitution the powers which the Federal government was to have. The other powers they kept for themselves. Any power not granted specifically to the Federal government is reserved to the states.

Among the powers granted to the Federal government, to be exercised by Congress, are two which have to do with the present case. Congress is given power to "declare war," and to do what is necessary to carry on war. Congress also is given power to "regulate commerce . . . among the several states."

Now for the facts of the present case: In 1917 Congress declared war against Germany. To carry on the war, munitions were necessary. To make munitions, Congress ordered the building of a dam at Muscle Shoals on the Tennessee River, called Wilson Dam. The primary purpose was to make nitrates for munitions. A secondary purpose was to "regulate commerce" between the states. A common means of commerce from state to state is navigable rivers. Consequently, Congress has power over navigable rivers. This includes power to build dams. In short, the building of Wilson Dam was indisputably an exercise by Congress of two powers specifically granted to Congress by the Constitution.

However, as an incident of Wilson Dam, electricity was developed. Congress three years ago directed that this electricity be sold. To this objection was made by persons interested in the private manufacture of electricity in that neighborhood. A suit was brought and it is this suit that the Supreme Court has now decided.

The court says in effect that since the dam was built to carry on war and to control navigation, Congress had power to build it. The court says further that since the building of the dam was a good faith exercise of powers clearly possessed by Congress, it follows that the Federal government has power to sell electricity which arises as an incident of the dam. The court says further that the Federal government has power to buy transmission lines in order to sell the power at retail to individual consumers.

The court bases all this on the ground that the original building of the dam was for the purposes of carrying on war and regulating navigation. The court regards the selling of electricity as, so to speak, a legitimate by-product of the dam.

The court is careful to say that "we limit our decision to the case before us." This leaves open the question of other dams, some on the Tennessee River, some elsewhere throughout the country. None of these other dams was started as an incident of war. Some can be regarded as having partially the purpose of regulating navigation. Some however have only or mainly the purpose of making electricity to be sold by the government As to these other dams, cases no doubt will come before the court in due course.

Now what is the present political issue underlying all this? Briefly, there is among the New Dealers, and elsewhere, a school of thought which says, in effect, that the Federal government ought to have power to do practically anything—anything which any administration at any time may feel like doing. They think the Federal government should have power to make and sell electricity without limit, to make and sell anything else, to regulate all farming and all farmers, to regulate all business everywhere, even small concerns doing a local business. These and many other powers are attempted in many New Deal statutes. This school of thought is impatient with the very existence of a distinction between Federal powers and state powers, set down in a document written 147 years ago. Some who feel this way would like the court to ignore this division of powers; or they would like to take away from the court its authority to pass upon questions arising out of the division of powers.

To this sort of thing, defenders of the court and of the Constitution say something like this: "By all means, if you want the Federal government to have all these powers, go and change the Constitution. There is a way to change it, duly provided in the Constitution. Take your argument before the people and persuade them to change the Constitution as you want it to be. Submit your proposal to public debate. Let the people pass upon it in the way provided by the Constitution. The court has a clear duty, from which it cannot depart. That duty is determined by the plain words of the Constitution as it now stands."

ECONOMIC HI-LIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Indivdual. National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

Talk of inflation is again heard in Congress. The government's bills are piling up—vast numbers of dollars must be found to pay for veterans' bonus, for the retirement of matured federal bonds, for the new farm program. Treasury experts are obviously dubious of the wisdom of issuing new bonds, and Congress itself, facing an election year, in which all Represenatives and a third of the Senators must again come before the electorate for approval or rejection, are extremely chary of passing new taxes or increasing old ones.

"So," say many Congressmen, in effect, "why don't we simply speed up to the presses in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving and produce new currency to meet our needs?" In support of this, they produce the fact that the gold now held by the Treasury has a value of $10,182,000,000, while the amount of currency in circulation totals but little more than half of that—$5,700,000,000.

In a recent feature article, "The New Gold Rush," the United States News summarizes the inflation problem, and shows why the "gold surplus" is not what it appears on the surface. A brief of the News' findings follows:

Of the $10,000,000,000 worth of gold stored by the Treasury, the Federal Reserve Banks hold gold certificates worth $7,930,700,000. These certificates are nothing more or less than warehouse receipts. The Treasury keeps the gold—the banks possess what amounts to a contract for its use. The certificates serve as backing for the $3,666,000,000 worth of federal reserve Notes which we all use in carrying on business transactions. They also serve as backing for other notes valued at a little more than $250,000,000.

Further, their part of the Treasury's gold is backing for all the bank deposits of the nation—totaling some $45,000,000,000—which are the source and mainstay of credit. Thus the gold certificates held by

Assembly Launches Probe Of Up-State Relief Problems

Albany — What is generally believed to be the outstanding legislative hearing of the session will get underway Tuesday when the Assembly Committee on Public Relief and Welfare, with the Assembly Ways and Means Committee "sitting in", launches an inquiry into the "fundamentals of the State relief problem."

Nominally the hearing will be on a bill introduced by Assemblyman Herbert Brownell, Jr., which measure provides for the creation of a legislative commission to conduct an investigation into the unemployment and relief problems with a view to recommending remedial legislation. The probe will be an Assembly "show", and is destined to exert a far-reaching influence over future handling of relief and the passage of laws affecting industry and labor.

Present plans call for the appearance before the committees of relief administrators and WPA executives, while the list of those appearing Wednesday is scheduled to contain the names of representatives of both large and small companies who, from first hand experience, will give their views on why expansion programs have not been carried forward by industry, and what affect existing national and state laws had upon industrial recovery in the state and nation.

Assemblyman James J. Wadsworth, Chairman of the Assembly Public Relief and Welfare Committee, has been working on plans for the unemployment hearings since immediately after the organization of the Assembly on January 1st last. In this effort he has been ably assisted by Assemblymen Brownell, Leonard W. Hall of Nassau; Jane H. Todd of Westchester, and the other members of the committee, a number of whom have had direct and lengthly contact with the administration of relief in their respective counties.

Legislative-Lehman Fight

Even though the unemployment hearing holds the center of the legislative stage the war between the Governor and the Legislature over the administration's anti-crime bills and accompanying ramifications, continues to smoulder ominously.

Had the Governor been content to take his case to the people without inferentially accusing members of the legislature of being controlled in their voting by "powerful groups" * * * "more interested in keeping crime safe for the criminal than in protecting law-abiding citizens", the legislature would not have become the armed camp that it is.

However, having issued his initial attack upon the Legislature, despite, it is said, the protests of some of his closest advisors, Governor Lehman is now "stuck with his own statement", and, as legislators put it, "must retract, apologize, bluff it out, or becloud the issue". His statewide radio address last Sunday night, heard over WOKO-WABC and affiliated stations of the Columbia Broadcasting System, did not, in the opinion of Capitol observers, heal the breach or rally much support for the more objectionable of the anti-crime bills which have failed of passage. It is thought likely that Republican legislative leaders will answer the Governor's address.

Theories

There are a number of theories anent the reason for the Governor's new-found interest in anti-crime legislation. Assemblyman Horace M. Stone, of Onondaga, has declared, "The Governor is trying to lead the Legislature up a bridle path toward the woods by rowing about his anti-crime bills so that this Lehman-created issue will overshadow public objections to the size of his budget and his insistence upon passage of his tax bills. Taxes and the budget, and not crime bills, are the vital issues before us, and in diverting attention from the budget and tax bills, Governor Lehman has emulated the example of Mussolini, who started a war in Ethiopia to hide prevailing conditions in Italy."

Another school of thought has it that Governor Lehman has become alarmed at the support being given the anti-crime measures proposed by Attorney-General John J. Bennett at a time when many Lehman anti-crime bills are being universally denounced. In this connection political observers are keenly aware of the potential strength of the Bennett boom for Governor on the Democratic ticket, which boom was first launched by influential leaders in the state several years ago. And despite the characteristic Lehman coyness and anent renominations, and the customary pause to await the clarion call of an allegedly aroused electorate, the fact remains there are few cases decorating the pages of posterity wherein an individual who has sipped the heady wine of high public office ever became enthusiastic about relinquishing the wine or the cup without a slightly undignified struggle. Perhaps the Greeks have a word for it, but in English the word is "pique".

Still another school of thought leans to the belief that there exists on the part of Governor Lehman a definite "fear" that the Republicans in the Legislature are planning to investigate the number of complaints, filed with him since he became Governor against law enforcement officers throughout the state charged with failure to properly enforce the law, or to vigorously prosecute offenders caught in the net of justice. Many such complaints have been filed with the Governor, it is unofficially reported, and it is declared there are few cases extant wherein Mr. Lehman took drastic action looking towards the removal of careless, incompetent or politically controlled enforcement officers. Thus the Governor's persistent oratorical jag over anti-crime bills this year, his critics declare.

Druckman Exhibit A

Legislators who hold that anti-crime laws now on the statute books are adequate, even though law enforcement officers are frequently not so adequate, are pointing to the outcome of the notorious Druckman murder case in Kings County which, last week, resulted in Meyer Luckman, his nephew, Harry Luckman and Fred J. Hull being sentenced to twenty years to life imprisonment following conviction of second degree murder. The finger pointers recall that the Democratic District Attorney of Kings County, Francis F. X. Geoghan, had been unable to secure convictions of the trio in the Druckman slaying and it was not until Joseph D. McGoldrick, unsuccessful candidate for District Attorney on the Republican ticket, called public attention to the case and charged that bribes amounting to $150.000 had been passed, the bribing involving, he alleged, two prominent Democratic politicians in Kings County, that Governor Lehman gave the case any attention whatever. When McGoldrick insisted that Geoghan be superseded in the public good, Governor Lehman declared he "would take no action until after election". Mr. Geoghan was re-elected; the Governor at length superseded him and appointed Special Prosecutor Hiram C. Todd and convictions were obtained with admirable promptness.

As a result of the convictions in the Druckman case, a plan is reported to be on foot among members of the Legislature to publicly demand that the Governor remove Mr. Geoghan from office on the ground that, in "failing to obtain conviction in this notorious case, which convictions were subsequently obtained by a Special Prosecutor, the District Attorney has shown himself to be an incompetent public official and law enforcement officer and therefore should be removed if the Governor's interest in law enforcement is as keen as he says it is and he is not swerved from his path of duty by powerful Democratic groups in Kings County."

Legislators are also wondering if, in view of the Governor's appointment of Thomas Dewey to investigate racketeering in New York County, this also represents implied incompetence on the part of District Attorney William C. Dodge in that Dewey has already obtained a number of convictions which, in usual path of duty, should be the job of the District Attorney proper. In short, some glaring inconsistencies appear in the Governor's attitude on crime as well as allied subjects.

Budget Cuts Mark Time

Although the Senate has passed the Governor's $308,000,000 budget and tax bills, the Assembly Ways and Means Committee is still engaged in efforts looking towards slashing the budget and making possible the elimination of at least one cent a gallon of the "emergency" gasoline tax laws. It is expected that next week will mark the appearance of the recommendations of the Ways and Means Committee headed by Assemblyman Abbot Low Moffat.

Delegates to Convention

Delegates and alternates at large to the National Republican Convention were elected last week at a meeting of the Republican State Committee, held in New York. Those elected delegates-at-large include: Charles D. Hilles and Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt, National Republican Committeemen from New York State; Representative Bertrand H. Snell of Potsdam, Minority Leader of Congress; Edward H. Butler, Publisher of the Buffalo Evening News; Mrs. Virginia M. Bacon of Westbury, L. I., Vice Chairman of the Republican State Committee; Congressman James W. Wadsworth of Geneseo; John R. Crews, former Union Labor delegate and Republican leader of Kings County, and Charles H. Griffiths, Republican leader of Westchester County. Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton relinquished his right to attend the convention as a delegate-at-large and will run as a district delegate from the 34th Congressional District.

Alternates-at-large elected include: Henry Root Stern, treasurer of the Republican State Committee of Manhasset, L. I.; Fred Ereth of Rochester; Frank G. Sherman of Oneonta, Republican County Chairman of Otsego County; George W. Wibecan of Kings County; Miss Caroline Bareham of Syracuse; George W. Fanelli and George H. Sibley of New York County, and Miss Natalie Couch of Nyack, N. Y.

Analysis of those elected show that three named, Miss Bareham, Mr. Ereth and Mr. Sibley are Young Republicans; that Congressman Wadsworth is a veteran of the Spanish-American War, and Mr. Sibley, Mr. Griffiths and Mr. Stern are veterans of the World War, the latter having been wounded and awarded the Distinguished Service Cross; and that the colored people are represented by Mr. Wibecan, an outstanding negro leader in the colored Republican circles in the state. Other races and creeds are similarly represented in those named, all of which answers allegations by Congressman Hamilton Fish, Jr., that "no war veterans are on the slate". It similarly answers charges of Walter J. Mahoney, president of the Association of New York State Young Republican Clubs, that "Young Republicans have not been given recognition as delegates-at-large or alternates". Mr. Mahoney made his charge by open letter, read at last week's meeting of the State Committee, Edwin F. Jaeckel, Republican leader of Erie County, acting as emissary for the presentation of the document. Republican State Chairman Eaton has already answered the Mahoney communication, citing, at length, exactly what recognition had been given Young Republicans since he, Eaton, was elected State Chairman.

This recognition includes Assembly patronage; a plea by Mr. Eaton to County Chairmen for the election of Young Republicans to the National Republican Convention; the inauguration of a series of conferences between a committee of Young Republicans and the State Chairman; "co-operation" in having Young Republicans attend the National Young Republican convention held in Des Moines, Ia. last year; close working relationship by Mr. Eaton with county organizations of Young Republicans throughout the state, and finally, recognition, as has been already set forth, to three prominent Young Republicans on the "at-large" slate of those attending the National Republican Convention.

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State colleges of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a

S. F., writes: "I understand your studies show that early hatched pullets pay best. How early do you recommend? Why does early hatching bring greater returns?"

Professor L. M. Hurd of the poultry department replies: "For greater returns from pullets, the first step is to hatch or buy chicks early. Chicks from such birds as Rhode Island Reds and Barred Rocks should be in the brooder house before April 1. Light breeds like Leghorns should be out before May 1.

"In the past ten or fifteen years, several state experimental stations, including Cornell, have carried on studies to show what effect the date of hatch has on the development and production of pullets.

"The March and April hatched pullets gave best results. They grew faster, had the least sickness, grew larger, laid the largest eggs, the most fall and winter eggs, as well as the highest total for the year. They were the most profitable.

"Some of the reasons for greater returns are that early chicks have less trouble from risease, which result in fewer losses in rearing. Early pullets bring more money and usually grow to be larger birds. They lay a larger part of the year's eggs in the fall when prices are high."

Potato Growers Losing Market

Other States Sell Heavily in Metropolitan Area, Porter Reveals

Why potatoes grown in New York State have been forced out of the New York City market is a problem of deep concern to all farmers in the state, about three-fourths of whom grow potatoes, according to Roy A. Porter of Elma, president of the organized potato growers in New York.

The state's peak production, nearly 49,000,000 bushels in 1909, dropped to the all-time low of nearly 22,000,000 bushels in 1929, he says. While national production increased forty-seven per cent between 1899 and 1934, New York's acreage declined thirty-two per cent.

Part of the drop, he notes, is due to abandonment of poor agricultural land, but adds that potato growers are concerned with losses of acreage and production due to other causes which represent economic losses both to the individual and to the state.

"In 1919 New York State supplied, about thirty-three per cent of all the potatoes arriving in New York City, compared with twenty per cent from Maine and twelve per cent from eleven states that produce early potatoes. By 1929, just ten years later, New York state supplied only nineteen per cent of the potatoes sold on the metropolitan market, most of these from Long Island. In the same year Maine supplied forty-seven per cent and the eleven early states, thirteen per cent. An analysis of the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh markets shows a similar discrimination against New York potatoes."

Need Research

The problem of recapturing lost northern markets for western and central New York growers is one of research, concludes Mr. Porter.

"Perhaps the interior quality of our tubers is inferior. We don't know. Perhaps it is a problem of crop rotation and its possible effect on exterior quality; or it may be the use of Rural types of potatoes, so long favored as the leading varieties by growers in these areas Perhaps we need new types and varieties for consumers in northern markets. Perhaps it is a question of soil, or grades and grading. These things should be found out."

Tuber defects, many resulting either from insect attacks or diseases, are especially serious, says Mr. Porter, and take a terrific toll from the quality of commercial potatoes. "During the past year thirty per cent of the acreage of potatoes offered for certification failed to meet state standards.

"The importance of the potato industry in New York state is well recognized. During the eleven years 1924-1934, potatoes stood second in value for seven years as compared with other farm crops. During the eleven-year period the lowest annual return from the crop, in 1931, was in excess of $13,000,000; the highest annual return, in 1925, was about $44,000,000."

Horse Meetings Scheduled By Farm Bureau

Several hundred thousand dollars will be invested by Steuben County farmers in the purchase of horses in 1936.

In order that these purchases can be made to the best advantage the Farm Bureau is now organizing a series of meetings at which this subject will be discussed.

Professor H. A. Willman, expert horseman at the College of Agriculture will explain at these meetings how to detect common weaknesses in horses, what to look for in the selection of a sound and rugged horse that will give many years of satisfactory service.

Schedule of these meetings and other information will be published in next week's edition of this paper.

came to this community in the fall of 1835 from Chenango County and she was born the following February. A good many of her younger days were spent at school district No. 14. in East Troupsburg where she walked a distance of 2 miles to and from school.

On October 2, 1853, she married Eli Bates, the ceremony being performed in her father's home by the Rev. Warren Rice, a Baptist minister. To this union were born three sons, the oldest, Erastus, now deceased, born May 2, 1855, Horace was born September 3, 1868. He now resides in North Dakota, and Frank, of South Addison, on April 29, 1873. There are eight grandchildren and six or more great grand-children.

Mrs. Bates' husband died October 3, 1919. They had been married 66 years. He was a devout christian, doing his duty to God and attending church as long as his health and eye-sight permitted. Mr. Bates was the head carpenter when the East Troupsburg Baptist church was erected in 1874. He built all the pews in the church these being still in use.

On February 6, 1858, Mrs. Bates was baptized by the Rev. George Balcom and joined the East Troupsburg church; the ice in the creek being from 4 to 5 inches thick at the time of her baptism. On June 11, 1881, she joined the Woodhull church by letter, being an earnest and faithful worker.

Mrs. Bates now resides at the home of her grandson, Howard Bates, which is known as the Rowley place, on the Woodhull-Addison highway. This has been her home for the past four years. Her early married life was spent on the Bates homestead in East Troupsburg which is now owned by Eli Miller.

Later they resided with their son, Erastus Bates, on what is now the M. H. Williams farm. They also resided for some time in this village where Merwin Fuller now lives.

She attended the Baptist Association the last time it was held in Woodhull and has attended church at East Troupsburg within the past year. Mr. and Mrs. Bates always and have an enviable record of attending for 50 years without missing.

She states that in her youth the form of entertainment was different from that of today, instead of dances and card parties they enjoyed logging bees and apple bees. She recalls attending church services in a barn but never attending a barn dance and also believes that the young people of today do not find real enjoyment that they did in the days of her girlhood. She regrets that family worship does not have the prominent place in the homes of today as in the olden days —also church worship.

Their mode of conveyance was a yoke of oxen but they usually walked to church. Winter visiting was enjoyed when the whole family ted out late in the afternoon, stayted out late in the afternoon, staying for supper and spending the night.

Her favorite songs are the old sacred ones, such as, "The Old Rugged Cross" "Shall We Meet Beyond the River" and "The Far Away Home of My Soul." She has two favorite pieces of poetry both of which she can repeat, they are "The Business of Friendship" and God's Providence".

The success of the affair is due to the efforts of the committee from the Woodhull and East Troupsburg Baptist churches. They were: Mrs. Leona Reynolds, Mrs. Emma Williams, Mrs. Carrie Ten Broeck, Mrs. Addie Myers, Mrs. Isabelle Andrus, Mrs. Alice Brown and the Rev. and Mrs. George Jones of Woodhull and Mrs. Fred Tyler, Miss Jennie Miller and Carl Carpenter of East Troupsburg.

Washington Snapshots

by JAMES PRESTON

The real "low-down" on the drive for adjournment of Congress by May 1 is that it was decided upon when majority leaders saw increasing signs of an uprising which would threaten their control of the legislators.

The indications that Congress was no longer willing to be completely a "rubber-stamp" were brought into the open by the dispute over the neutrality bill, on which the administration was compelled to give way and accept the Congressional version. Simultaneously, the House and its Appropriations committee were refusing to make money available for some of the pet brain trust projects, including the harnessing of tides at Passamaquoddy, Maine, and the cross-Florida canal; the inflationists moved nearer a vote on their bills; Secretary Wallace's demands that the new farm program must be law by February 15 were ignored; and members by the score talked vigorously, if privately for the most part, against the passage of industrial control measures like the Walsh government contract and the O'Mahoney industry licensing bills, which would retard recovery.

The Supreme Court is the only real voice of the average, unorganized American. Congress is supposed to be, but it actually represents cohesive minorities. Some folks complain that the views of 5 men on the Supreme Court now rule the fate of 125,000,000 people. Even agreeing that this is a fact, wouldn't it be much worse to put that power into the hands of 4 men? Or or 1?

Interestingly, the advocates of this change are inconsistent or something. You don't hear them insisting that they must be elected unanimously, or by 6 to 3 majorities, or that Congress must pass laws unanimously, or by 6 to 3 majorities.

Possibly of more significance was the steady shelving of all proposals to amend the Constitution or obtain the same objective by clipping the authority of the Supreme Court. Tests of sentiment last year showed the country against amending the Constitution to give the federal government more power and the states less. In recent months one speech after another has come from Secretary Wallace and others aimed at the courts. But once again the reaction was bad. Senator George of Georgia spoke out boldly in the Senate against tampering with the judiciary and warned that his patriotism was stronger than party loyalty.

Insiders who ought to know say the flurry over whether John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers should get a raise from $12,000 to $25,000 a year was carefully staged dramatics.

The U. M. W.'s action in voting the raise, they say, accomplished three things: Told other unions which favor the Lewis industrial rather than the American Federation of Labor craft union ideas that the U. M. W. believes in its leader; gave Lewis the opportunity to win more friends by turning down the raise; brought higher pay to other U. M. W. staffers who otherwise could not have won the increases.

One thing that makes a lot of thrifty-minded Congressmen want to adjourn is a new pamphlet written by Lewis W. Douglas entitled "There is One Way Out" and published by the Atlantic Monthly Company. Douglas, once a good friend of the present administration, resigned as budget director because of his objections to the spending spree. In his pamphlet he calculates that in the last three years the federal government has spent as much as it did under 24 presidents in the first 122 years of the nation's history.

The longer Congress stays in session, the more it votes to spend. And the tougher that make it on the small salaried man when the time comes to pay the bill.

The Congressmen who want to know what their constituents really think are in an old-fashioned dilemma. On Tuesday, say, a group of organized labor represenatives walks in to a Congressman's office urging him to vote for bills which would re-create the bad features of NRA. And on Wednesday, the American Federation of Labor remarks in its January review of business that a revival of the consumer goods industries — those which produce food, clothing, homes and the like—would give jobs to 6,000,000 but adds: "Only since NRA was declared unconstitutional has recovery even started in these industries."

Predicts New Taxes On Smaller Incomes

WASHINGTON (IPS)— Senator Walsh, Massachusetts Democrat, believes that new taxes necessary to pay for the spending spree "will hit the persons with smaller incomes in 1937 or shortly thereafter."

This is the way he put it in a statement:

"One thing is certain, that the spending program of the government will mean increased taxes or inflation in 1937, if not before. If we are to have increased taxes they will have to be obtained through lower income tax exemptions and higher normal and surtax rates; also new inheritance taxes, and also possibly a general manufacturers sales tax."

Since "it has not been the practice through the history of depressions to inaugurate economies in an election year," Walsh predicted that budget balancing too would be put off until after November.

Teacher Says Wealth Taxes Cripple School Endowments

NEW YORK (IPS)—Unless the campaign to "soak the rich" is stopped, says Dr. James Rowland Angell, president of Yale, privately endowed schools and universities face extinction.

"Institutions resting on endowments," he remarked in a recent speech here, "are threatened fundamentally by the type of movement sweeping the political life of the country. If the process goes much further, I can see nothing except the ultimate ruin of these institutions."

Minority Rule

In a discussion of why the founders of this nation finally decided upon the balanced system of government which we now have—legislative, executive and judicial — Former Senator Reed had this to say:

"Realizing that the legislature or executives might mistakenly or willfully enact statutes or do acts violative of the rights of the citizen as reserved in the supreme law (theConstitution), they established a great court to protect the people against all such violations. The Supreme Court is therefore the high court of the people, for its great prerogative is to preserve the law enacted by the people as the sup reme law of the land.

"Strike down the Supreme Court and you destroy the Constitution. You substitute for the supreme law enacted by the people the unrestricted will of Congress. You make Congress omnipotent and the people completly subject to its whims, caprices, ambitions and venalities. You drive a knife through the heart of liberty."

Senator Reed knows his history. A study of proceedings at the first Constitutional convention, and of speeches made in the states by delegates who subsequently fought for and won adoption of the Constitution, shows that. But, unfortunately there are now a bunch of self-styled "liberals" who want to force the Supreme Court to agree 6 to 3, or perhaps unanimously, before it can hold an act of Congress unconstitutional.

Bureaucracy Costs Money

The pet project of federal "Brain Truster No. 1" is doing a swell job—of spending money! Newspapermen in Washington who went after facts found out these things about Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell's Rural Resettlement Administration:

Since its inception, the Resettlement Administration has spent $46,000,000. Of that total, $19,727,305 went to "administrative costs," paying 13,045 employes, office rent all over the country, traveling expenses (in $1,000 automobiles) and numerous similarly worthy purposes.

That's more than forty cents out of every dollar. It is fairly indicative of the dollar's worth Uncle Sam gets out of his whole federal establishment, which had 815,789 employes in December, a gain of 211,078 in a year. And that total—the biggest in history—did not include the CCC, army, navy, Congress or the courts.

Hail to bureaucracy! (We almost said "Heil Hitler!") It gives the taxpayer 60 cents worth for his dollar!

A Messiah Falls

Last August, Mr. William Aberhart was elected premier of Alberta province, Canada, on a promise to pay a "social dividend" of $25 a month to everybody in Alberta. He told the voters not to worry about where the money was coming from; just leave that to him.

Now the Alberta legislature is in session. It finds that no $25 dividends have been paid; none are in sight. The provincial government already boosted its taxes to the limit and its credit is so bad it can't borrow. So Mr. Aberhart is on a sizzling political platter.

Is it possible that some would-be American Messiahs would be in the same frying pan if they were confronted with the hard reality of having to make good rather than just promising so as to be elected?

Round Two

When the federal government started its assault on business, and thereby attacked the foundations of our tried and proved system of government, it made laws of such restrictive and undemocratic things as the NRA.

Public opinion, and the Supreme Court, ended that round. Progress and business, then had a chance to catch its breath while new trouble was shaped up for it. That was labelled the "breathing spell."

Now round two has started. Half a dozen proposals more dangerous and dictatorial than NRA are in the legislative mill. But a worse side of the picture is what could happen, and what some believe is happening, to folks who dare to speak out against the trend in Washington. The things that could happen include:

Prosecution of individuals for alleged income tax violations, so timed to offset the effect of their criticisms; the distribution of questionaires, prying into heretofore private affairs; the threat that those who don't keep quiet will not get government contracts; the intimation that certain persons may not get loans from the government; or if they already have them the threat that the loans will be called instead of extended; the threat that those who try to get back illegally-paid AAA processing taxes will be prosecuted for alleged income tax law violations forgotten for many years.

Some propose a law forbidding employers to attempt to influence those who work for them. How about expanding that to forbid the government to exert dictatorial pressure against those who say what they think? Or has the grand old American institution of free speech been closed down?

the Federal Reserve constitutes a trust fund, shared in by all the country's bank depositors, who were forced to turn in their own gold and gold certificates in 1933.

After the gold backing of the gold certificates is taken out, the Treasury has about $2,250,000,000 worth of the yellow metal left in stock. But even this portion of the total gold hoard is not "free." One billion eight hundred millions of it is in the stabilization fund, which is used to protect the dollar in currency wars.

The remainder, of about $45,000,000, is included in the Treasury's general fund. If new money were issued against the half-billion, the Treasury's cash balance would be proportionately reduced, and nothing could be gained.

So, concludes the News, in which it agrees with recent statements of Treasury officials, there is no available gold against which new currency can be issued. If such new currency is ordered by Congress—over an almost inevitable Presidential veto—it will be necessary to confiscate partially or wholly the gold held in trust for bank depositors. And it is a certainty that any inflationary program will meet with terrific opposition not only from those in high places in industry and government, but from millions of "ordinary citizens" as well.

The political parade is getting underway now, with bandwagons on every corner. Principal attention is naturally centered on the Republicans, as only a miracle of the first dimension could prevent the renomination of President Roosevelt.

Two candidates for the Republican nominations have definitely thrown their hats into the ring—Colonel Knox, publisher of the Chicago News, a conservative, and famed Senator Borah of Idaho,, a liberal. Both these men have entered their name in the Illinois primaries, where a real test of their respective strength will be had. Colonel Knox is sure to have the backing of the "old-line" Republicans, while Senator Borah is enthusiastically endorsed by the "progressive group." Comon belief is that Senator Borah would be unbeatable in western and mid- western primaries, might run into trouble in the east.

Governor Landon of Kansas is also seeking the nomination, is known to have scouts at work in various states seeking to determine his popularity. Two big newspaper publishers—Paul Bloch and William Randolph Hearst—are strong for Governor Landon, and he also has the approval of one of the most distinguished Republican journalists, William Allen White.

There is still talk on the behalf of Senator Vandenburg—and one wing of the party would like to see Mr. Hoover given another chance for the Presidency.

As a result, the Republican convention is going to be one fight after another, and it will make headlines for many a day. Some think that the more prominent candidates may offset each other, and lead to the nomination of a dark horse.

New York Trees Share Memorial

Cherry trees from New York state will grace the boulevard from Fredericksburg to the George Washington boyhood farm in Suffolk county, Virginia.

They will grow along with trees from other main cherry producing states, and with trees of the flowering variety from Japan, as a memorial to the Nation's First President.

Plans called for the planting of a double row of cherry trees along this route to the farm where Washington lived as a boy, and where, according to legend, he chopped down his father's favorite cherry tree, broke the neck of his mother's valued colt, and threw the dollar across the Rappahannock river.

On behalf of New York state's cherry industry, Governor Herbert H. Lehman has presented forty trees to be planted along the memorial drive. Governors of other principal cherry producing states were expected to cooperate in a similar way.

Governor Lehman pointed out, in making known the contribution, that New York state is the second largest cherry producing state in the Union. He said he admired the courage and action of the entire industry in attempting to overcome the unfavorable situation it has occupied throughout the past five seasons.

He characterized the memorial drive of cherry trees as especially fitting, and expressed the hope that it may become a thing of beauty, a reflection of the part cherries have played in thee history of the country, and a worthy memorial to the country's first President.

The tendency of the past few years toward consumer-sized packages has spread recently to include the marketing of potatoes in small and attractive containers.

The meeting will be held in the auditorium of the Jasper school. Sponsored by the Farm Bureau it has for its purpose the betterment of the dairy industry of Steuben County.

All dairymen are invited to attend the sessions and to participate in the discussions. Further details in regard to the meeting will be announced in next week's edition.

or credit for private profit at the expense of the public."

The men who wrote that platform, and they included, if I remember correctly, Secretary Cordell Hull and Senator Glass, had the firm conviction that it was the tariff, plus the development of monopolies in large part fostered by the tariff, that were chiefly responsible for the credit inflation of the '20s, the collapse of the gold standard, the destruction of currencies, and the unbalancing of budgets.

This central conviction of the 1932 platform Al Smith did not mention in his speech, probably because he does not share it since he has always been a high protectionist and no great critic of monopoly.

Nevertheless, the men who hold to the basic principles of the 1932 platform are the heart and center of the real opposition inside the Roosevelt Administration, among the Democrats in Congress, and in the country. The issue which has separated Mr. Roosevelt from the seasoned leaders in his party lies right there. The basic quarrel of these men with the New Deal is that it attempted under N. R. A. and A. A. A. to carry to their logical conclusions the very principles the platform denounced, that instead of striking at the tariff and monopoly, it sought to provide a tariff and a monopoly for every powerful group.

The men who think this way are the Democratic leaders who have been ousted by the New Dealers or segregated where they cannot exercise much influence. Yet, whether their principles are right or wrong, they alone have an intelligible alternative to the collectivism of the New Deal and the rampant plutocracy of the old deal. I venture to say that they have the support of more of the considered and disinterested opinion of the country than any other group, and that includes the private but real convictions of many of the most influential leaders in the so-called liberal and conservative wings of both parties.

Regardless of the outcome of the election, they can hold the balance of power in the Senate during the next four years if they choose to exercise the power that is theirs Neither party can govern without them if they become a conscious political group, if they reaffirm their principles, and rise to the opportunity that circumstances have created.

Jasper High Clinches Flag In Southern Section, Class "C" By Trouncing Campbell, 34-12

Joe Lewis Plays Entire Game With an Infected Leg—Campbell's Rally in Third Period is Unavailing—Rough Riders Play Bath February 28.

The Rough Riders rode to Campbell and clinched the southern section title of the County class "C" league with a 34-12 victory Friday. Although being slightly handicapped by an infected leg on Jumping Joe Lewis, stellar forward, the team made an excellent showing on a foreign court. Lewis played the entire game but was noticeably slowed up. However he managed to dunk in four points. The Maroon team controlled the ball for the entire first period but were unable to find the basket. Their shots bombarded the hoop from every angle but only one entered for scores. They finally found the range in the second period. Campbell put on a drive in the third but didn't gain any ground. The Maroon team scored almost at will during the final quarter.

Campbell drew first blood on Hauraham's foul. Willover put the Maroon ahead with a steve. Jasper emerged with a nine-one lead in the second canto after Murphy and Swan scored a goal apiece and three fouls.

Willover opened the third stanza with a goal. Hauraham sunk one and converted a foul. Waight retaliated with a double-decker. Lustig sunk a short one. Lewis made it up on a fast cut. Mon dropped a steve. Swan converted a foul shot. Lewis sunk a short one and Campbell called time out.

Hauraham and Mon each sunk a steve for Campbell's only score in the final quarter while the Jasper team rang up sixteen points.

Willover was the only man on the floor who did not have a foul called on him, while two of Campbell' and one of Jasper's men had three. Campbell scored two points out of nine free throws. Jasper made four out of fourteen.

Swan scored fifteen points to take high honors. Hauraham with six points led the Campbell hoopsters.

Paced by fast floor work on the part of Gene Cornell, the Jasper J. V's overwhelmed the Campbell rookies, 19-7. Campbell looked pretty good in the first half when both teams spent most of their time shooting foul shots, coming out on the short end of a 7-6 score. They tied the score with another foul early in the second half, but the Maroon team went home rapidly, scoring twelve points and holding Campbell scoreless, Benton and McMindes starred on the defense for Jasper.

Having won the gonfalon in the southern section of the County, the Rough Riders journey to Bath on the 28th to try to upset the northern champs. However, as Prattsburg, winner in that section, has suffered defeat at the hands of Campbell, Bradford, Savona and Avoca, all of which have fallen at the hands of the Rough Riders by sizeable margins, it seems that the nod will go to the Maroon team. In such an event, they will tangle with Alfred High in the intercounty matches at Alfred. A win there will land them in Rochester in the sectional finals.

Addison Girls Sweep Double Bill, Overcoming Westfield and Jasper Sextets on Local Floor

First Team Holds Westfield Scoreless in Opening Half—Zone Defenses Battle Battles Invaders—Palziak Scores on Long Shot in Last Session—Addison Seconds Show Class Against Jasper Girls.

The Addison High School Girls teams captured a double header on the local gym floor last Thursday, taking the Westfield girls into camp, 28 to 10 and turning back the Jasper High lassies, 16 to 11.

Addison's offense, with Chart and Burlingame feeding the ball to Space, who towered above her opponents, was too much for Westfields. The zone defense of Crawford ,Nellis and Manson was too puzzling for the visitors and they were unable to score in the first half. The defense functioned just as well in the second period, Palzial being compelled to shoot over it to compile all of the points for her team.

During most of the game, the Addison femmes looked unbeatable, but occasionally a lack of cohesion was apparent. If the local girls can get Canisteo team with a pair of victories in the two forthcoming matches, they will be able to lay claim to the championship of the county.

Against Jasper the second team played good ball and the out-come was never in doubt. Offensively and defensively they showed fine team play and cooperation. No single girl was outstanding, but as a team they worked beautifully. Many considered Jasper superior to the Westfield team, which adds greatly to the prestige of the victory for the Addison reserves. The showing of many of the reserves places them in a strong position as candidates for the varsity and will compell all the girls to work hard for their berths. The result should insure a fine representative team for the Addison girls.

Westfield Overcomes Addison Five With Bell and Dillman In Stellar Offensive Roles

Knights, However, Play Visitors Even in Second Half—Hargrave Leads Addison Scoring—Domenick, Triches, Orr and Gardner Also Have a Part—Locals Outweighed by Big Margin.

A big rugged aggregation of basket tossers from Westfield High School came to town Tuesday night, handing the Addison Knights a setback 37 to 20. Led by Bell, an Elmira star of a year ago, the visitors rolled up a commanding lead in the first half which came in handy later in the fray as the Knights became more adept at the Tanners style of play and succeeded in breaking up most of the Pennsylvanians scoring thrusts in the final session.

Bell started the scoring a moment after the start of hostilities by dropping a sucker shot. The same player added two more goals within the next couple of minutes and Dillman ran the visitor's total to eight by looping one through from near the foul line. Joe Dominick broke the ice for Addison by scooping the ball from the floor and dropping it through from the twenty foot mark. The quarter ended with Westfield in the lead 12 to 6.

In the second stanza, Bell and Dillman continued their scoring spree, shooting with uncanny accuracy to run the lead of the Tanners up to 25 to 8 at the half. Johnny Orr gave the Knights their only counter by executing a difficult overhand shot just before time was called.

Johnny also caged another safety immediately after the start of the third. A goal and a foul by Ray Hargrave ran the Addison total to thirteen and the Knights were keeping practically apace with the visitors. Joe Dominick pepped things up by scoring from in front of the hoop in the final quarter and Larry Gardner gave the Knights their remaining points by making good on a free throw.

Dillman and Bell were, of course, outstanding for the Westfielders. The presence of Kozel, former Rochester high school court star at a gaurd position added much to their defensive play and was largely instrumental in holding down the score of the Knights. For Addison, the rangy figure of Ray Hargrave was practically in every play, the big boy being the soule member of the Knights alignment, whose stature enabled him to compete on even terms with the blu-clad goliaths. "Hos" caged three goals and made good on a foul try, besides shining on the defense. Triches, Orr, Gardner and Dominick all had a hand in the scoring of the Knights and this quartet, together with Little and Root, played excellent ball, especially considering that they were weighed by twenty or thirty pounds to a man.

The Addison Knights Lose After Battle at Northside

The Addison Knights yielded to the Corning Northside on the Corning floor Friday night, 32 to 18. Strength in the foul shooting department gave the Tigers the major portion of their victory margin.

The Knights were in the game with plenty of gusto and due to their own anxiety and determination charged the Northsiders continually as they bottled them up. These traits took the fight out of the Corning five and the score was close all the way. Just before the end of the half it was tied at 12 all and not until Carlineo and Wexel entered the game as replacements and Addison had two men put out on fouls was the Corning team able to draw away from the Knights. Carlineo and Wexel made sixteen points or half the N, H. S. total in the closing minutes. The battle was spirited all the way and many decisions of the referee were criticised.

The Addison team showed greatly improved form over its recent games and seemed to have found itself against the Tigers. Hargrave, Dominick and Gardner were best for the Knights, Carlineo, Wexel and Clark for Northside.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, N. B. Gardner, who passed away Feb. 23, 1934
Deep in my heart lies a picture,
Of a loved one laid to rest,
In memory's frame I shall keep it,
Because he was one of the best.
Our lips can not tell how we miss him;
Our heart cannot tell what to say,
God alone knows how we miss him,
In a home that is lonesome today.
Wife and daughters.

"West Point Of The Air"

Hollywood "joined the army" recently when a large company of stars, featured players and technicians, were sent to Randolph Field, Texas, famous $10,000,000 air school for scenes in "West Point of the Air", Wallace Beery's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring picture to be shown Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the Avon Theatre.

The regiment of seventy cameramen, director's aides, sound recording experts and other workers, was the largest number ever sent out to a single location by the studio.

Cameras Everywhere

For aerial photography two cameras shot from the ground; two worked from a platform 168 feet in the air on top of Randolph tower, famous 4,000,000 candle power airplane beacon; two were in planes in the air, while a seventh camera "covered" from barrack roofs.

The first day's shooting included two difficult training maneuvers flown by army aces during one of their regular flights. Nearly one hundred ships in perfect flying formation created the letters "U.S.A." and formed a triple chevron mark.

While Beery flew from Hollywood in his six passenger Bellanca monoplane with his pilot Charles LaJotte, other members of the campany traveled by train. With them they carried over eight tons of cameras, sound and electrical equipment which was unpacked at the field.

It was one of the most complete "miniature studios" ever set up on a location, and included apparatus for developing and printing film so that the director could see the "tests" of scenes right on the flying field.

Famed Globe Trotter

Heading the camera crew was M-G-M's famed Clyde De Vinna, globe trotting lens expert, who has filmed pictures in Africa, the Arctic, and South Seas, with Charles Marshall, aerial camera expert and a staff of ten assistants. The company made its headquarters in San Antonio, Texas, twenty miles from the famous army training field during filming of the picture.

Notable supporting players who appeared in location scenes with Beery included Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lewis Stone, James Gleason, Rosalind Russell, Russell Hardie, Henry Wadsworth, Robert Livingston and Robert Taylor.

The picture is based on an original story by John Monk Saunders. Richard Rosson, who scored with his work as co-director of "Tiger Shark" and "Roar of the Crowd", directed.

Big Riding Posse Thrills in Western

One of the largest organized posses appearing in western pictures as well as one of the largest gangs of renegades, are pictured in the John Wayne western, "The New Frontier" Republic production which comes to the Avon Theatre for a run of two days starting Friday.

More than 135 mounted men are used in the Sheriff's posse and in the band of outlaws, and some of the most hair-raising feats of horsemanship are among the highlights of this new and interesting drama of the early days of the American plains when a land rush started a frontier settlement and a conflagration generally ended it.

Appearing opposite Wayne in "The New Frontier" is pretty Muriel Evans, while those in the supporting cast include Murdock MacQuarrie, Allan Cavan, Mary McClaren, Warner Richmond, Alfred Bridge, Sam Flint, Glen Strange and Earl Dwire.

This picture was produced by Paul Malvern and directed by Carl Pierson from Robert Emmett's original story and screenplay.
